"I Would Like to Exchange

These two pins for something different from your stock, if I may, as I ordered these from the Coast and they do not please me."

So spoke a lady some time ago and seemed greatly surprised that we did not at once comply with her wishes.

Needless to say that we were as greatly surprised at such a request. Doesn't the above illustrate just what has occurred to you over and over again? How often have you been entirely satisfied with the article ordered from away? Probably not often.

Now that conditions are the same here there would seem no further excuse for sending abroad for those things which can be purchased as well at home.

We don't want all the business, only a share of it; but when dividing it, let the home people have it.

You have noticed the very large stock of holiday goods in every department. If there ever was a time when we could cater to your wants, that time is now.

Our stock contains everything needful and useful, and if you cannot come to make a personal selection, we will gladly send you a large selection package, and as many as wanted until your wants are satisfied.

EXTINCT VOLCANO EDITOR MAY BE PARDONED SOON

WILLIAM H. MARSHALL has friends working for his pardon and they hope to have him released from Oahu prison in time to partake of Christmas cheer in his home. The movement was only recently begun and a petition will be circulated and presented to the Governor asking him to exercise his prerogative in the granting of pardons and release the former editor of the extinct "Sunday Volcano."

The former editor has been confined in the prison some weeks and is employed in clerical work. He is one of the bookkeepers and has the accounts relating to the disbursing of food supplies.

On his first introduction within the walls of the prison he was sent out with the common class of convicts who are required to do road work and other menial labor. Since then the Attorney General recommended many changes in the classing of prisoners and Mr. Marshall came under the privileged class.

THE NEWS OF THE HAWAII COURTS

A nolle prosequi was entered yesterday in the case of the Territory of Hawaii against H. N. Almy, proprietor of the Walkiki Inn, and the first judge of the Circuit Court ordered the defendant discharged.

The case arose out of the arrest of Mr. Almy on September 6, 1900, for selling spirituous liquors on the premises of the Inn without first obtaining a license. In the Circuit Court a number of witnesses testified to having purchased claret, whisky punches and other beverages on September 2. Judge Wilcox fined Almy $250 and costs.

In the case of the Territory of Hawaii vs. Hana (w), charged with selling spirituous liquors on October 13, 1900, to one H. Le Roy, without first having obtained a license so to do, a nolle prosequi was entered in the Circuit court and the defendant discharged.

In the District Court the defendant was fined $100 and costs. The principal witness for the prosecution, Harry Le Roy, has quit the country and his present whereabouts are unknown.

TURK GOES FREE.
The case of malicious injury against Frank J. Turk, one of the waterfront crimps who has lately gone to San Francisco, was nolle prossed in the Circuit Court yesterday. The action was brought by Wm. Bradford, a seaman, who alleged that Turk had taken away personal property from him to the value of $100, and as both the complainant and defendant have left the country a nolle prosequi was entered.

JURORS WERE EXCUSED.
The first judge of the Circuit Court yesterday notified the jurors impaneled for the term that they were excused until again notified to be present.

MANDAMUS BILL OF COSTS.
In the matter of the application of D. L. Akwai for a writ of mandamus vs. J. A. McCandless, Superintendent of Public Works for the Territory of Hawaii, a bill of costs amounting to $9.50 has been filed on which is written the following notation: "O. K. without prejudice as a precedent to the claim of right to recover costs. E. P. Dole, Attorney General."

ALFRED HALDER BURIED.
Died From the Injuries Received in a Fall on Molekai.

The funeral of Alfred Halder, who died at the Queen's Hospital Monday evening, was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The deceased was badly mangled by the fall of a derrick pole at Kaunakakai, Molokai, on Friday while he was engaged in loosening a guy rope at the top. He was brought to Honolulu on the steamer Noeau and attended by Dr. Walter Hoffman.

He was a German by birth, but a naturalized American citizen, and aged about 37 years. He leaves a widow. He came to Honolulu about the time the plague broke out and secured employment as a guard. His ability, however, was such that he was sent to the fumigating station next Kaunakapili church by Alfred W. Carter, who was then in charge of the guards. He was put to work in the fumigating department and proved a capable worker.

It was due to his sharp lookout that much of the property stored in and about the church was not stolen. After his services were through with as an employee of the Board of Health he secured employment with the Wilder Steamship Company on the steamer Helene, where he had a billet as mate. His wife came here in June. He was then employed by Catton & Neill.

The McBryde Plantation Company employed the deceased lately to unrig the mill at the American Sugar plantation, now defunct. In his fall from the topmast of the sixty-foot pole his skull was fractured, both legs broken and his collar bone fractured. His wife was in constant attendance on him until the last sad moments of his life.

NO PAY FOR TOIL AND PERIL.
OAKLAND, Nov. 14.—A hard-luck story comes off the whaling bark Gay-head that came down from the north on November 2d and slipped silently up to her moorings. A story of days and nights of fruitless watching for blubber and bone among the ice floes; of daily burials at sea of men who died from scurvy or some strange disease, and desertions of others who feared the horror that lurked in the forecastle.

The story was told today by J. J. Knewell, who shipped before the mast on the recent cruise and was with the bark on its ten months' voyage in the Arctic seas. He is a negro, possibly fifty years of age, with the manners taught in ante-bellum days and the broad dialect of "way down south."

Hat in hand, he slipped into the department where Judge Hart is trying the famous water case. Frightened, but evidently determined, he took up a position in front of the bench and asked for permission "tuh speak tuh de Coht." Without waiting to have his request granted he launched into his story, but it was incoherent through fright, and he was hustled into the corridor by Bailiff Morrison. There enough was learned to know that he desired "papahs," and he was conducted to the office of the district attorney, where he told his story to Deputy Hynes.

Knewell had shipped on a wage of $40 per month, he said, but had drawn no money, and when the bark arrived in this port he, with others of the crew, was given $1 and told there was nothing more coming to him, as the bark had taken but one whale. He alleged that the men were ill treated, and not given proper food, and as a result John Seaman died on June 25th; the second mate, John W. Smith, on July 14th; Alfred Miller on July 21st, and Jose Torres on July 22d. The two latter deaths occurred at Dutch Harbor, and frightened at the daily death list, several men slipped over the side and deserted. Out of a crew of twenty-two, all told, the bark had returned with but twelve. Knewell wanted papers that would compel the captain to pay him his wages, and offered to bring to the attorney several members of the crew who would substantiate his statements.

"Hit wuz des awful, suh, de way dem men died," he said. "Dey wuz tuk down powuhful sudden, an' it 'peahed lak dey des bloot an' bloot 'till dey des couldn' bloot no mo', an' de nex minit dey wuz daid. Puttin' uh man obah de side evah day skeered some uh de men an' dey 'tuhled, lef de ship, suh. I wuz on watch an' seed 'em go. Dey wuz skeered uh de cap'n, too. He wuz uh mighty shuvrigous man, used us powuhful bad an' didn't give us what we oughtuh haid to eat. But I'm plum off'n the bakh now, an' all I wants es mah money."

Deputy Hynes instructed him to ascertain the names of the owners of the Gayhead, and then return with other members of the crew, and he would see what could be done.
